- What started as a routine school pickup turned into an ordeal. I drove over a giant screw in the road which pierced through my tyre. As soon as I pulled it out... ppffffhhhh - all air in the tyre escaped. So for the first time in many years, and the first time with this car, I had to change the tyre. This was made more difficult by being on the side of a busy road, having a curious 7 year old, and a hungry 3 year old. Fortunately, I still remember how to change a tyre and after some time I managed to get the spare on. We drove to the local tyre repair shop who were friendly, but too busy to help this afternoon. I left the tyre with them and will go pick it up - hopefully repaired and not needing to be replaced - tomorrow.
